The clear message of all our Scriptures today is that riches just don’t make you happy. The author of Ecclesiastes keeps lamenting, “Vanity of vanities! All is vanity!” In other words, everything’s pointless, nothing brings him any real joy or peace of heart. In the Gospel parable the rich man says, “Eat, drink, be merry”, but God says to him, “Fool!” Between them St Paul exhorts us to set our minds on things that are above, not things on earth.

Looking a little deeper, the unhappy people in today’s readings don’t have any friends; they don’t have love; they’re alone. The writer of Ecclesiastes begrudges his possessions even to those who will eventually inherit them—his wife and children. What a grumpy old so-and-so! The rich man in the parable doesn’t think of his family either, let alone the poor. He has to talk to himself: “I will say to my soul ...” Finally, the man who approaches Jesus at the beginning of the Gospel, saying, “Tell my brother to divide the inheritance with me”, obviously doesn’t have any real relationship with that brother—or with Jesus! He just callously orders them both around.

Covetousness—the consuming desire for money and possessions—it would seem doesn’t in the end deliver the happiness it promises. It is like a smouldering fire, ultimately consuming everything in its path: love, friendship, care for the poor, family relationships, and most especially love for God. No wonder God has to say “Fool!” to those wander in that direction. No wonder St Paul calls it idolatry—a false religion. ... By the way, what is the implicit religion of our consumerist society?

God bless, Fr Stephen
